UK Outlook for Thursday 11 Nov 2021 to Saturday 20 Nov 2021:
Areas of low pressure lying to the north or northwest of the UK will bring changeable autumnal conditions at the start of the period. A weak band of rain across England and Wales will give way to brighter and drier interludes, with showers, longer spells of rain and occasional strong winds in the northwest. There is an increasing risk of heavy, blustery showers in the north, whereas the driest and brightest weather is likely to be in the southeast of the UK, with rain spreading to some areas at times. Temperatures around average throughout this period, although milder interludes will be more prevalent at first, and colder interludes increasingly possible later, where some wintry conditions are possible over higher ground in the north, with a slight risk at lower levels.
